

If history is any indication, we may be on the road to violent revolution. We got here because of the conservatives' war against liberal government.

It turns out that, historically, liberal nations make very poor grounds for revolution -- but deeply conservative ones very reliably create the conditions that eventually make violent overthrow necessary. And our own Republicans, it turns out, have done a hell of a job.

More...