This could extend the driving time of electric cars and the life of mobile devices such as cell phones, music players and cameras by the same amount, making a typical laptop battery last 40 hours instead of four..

"It's not a small improvement," researcher Yi Cui said. "It's a revolutionary development."

Cui expressed optimism that the technology could be commercialized within "several years."

More...