

The authorities may lawfully conduct searches and electronic surveillance against United States citizens in foreign countries without a warrant, a federal appeals court panel said on Monday, bolstering the government's power to investigate terrorism by ruling that a key constitutional protection afforded to Americans does not apply overseas.

More...

TVNL Comment: Wow! Once outside the country, the US Constitution no longer protects Americans from their own government. The horror continues....